

GERMAN CAVALRY PURSUING FRENCH AEROPLANE

Court Barber, a German artist, has depicted in the Illustrirte Zeitung of Leipzig a curious incident which occurred during the fighting along the Aisne. A patrol of German cavalry suddenly came upon a French aeroplane which for some reason had been obliged to make a landing while on a reconnaissance. The troopers galloped forward to capture it, and the aviator, seeing his danger, attempted to start the machine. Thereupon ensued a race between the scouts of the land and the air. The aeroplane finally got away.
